

Resources for Further Study

To learn more about the Legislative Council, the State Library is the repository of several resources of interest:

- Biennial reports covering the work of the Council from 1947 until its demise in 1973 are in the Library's collection.
- Large reports, such as the "Revised Washington Criminal Code" mentioned in the interview with Tim Burke are located at the Library.
- The Library keeps a "Washington History File" which contains informative pamphlets and articles such as, "Goodbye, Legislative Council—And Hello Patronage?" written by Dale Nelson (not dated).
